VIDEO: COUPLE PROVES FACEBOOK LISTENS IN ON CONVERSATIONS WITH SIMPLE EXPERIMENT

NEWS

What happens when you talk about a random item with your cell phone around?

If you have Facebook's Messenger app, apparently, your phone is listening – and feeding your information to Facebook.

The YouTube user Neville conducted a simple experiment after suspecting Facebook was listening in to his conversations through his cell phone's microphone – even when the phone is not in use.

"My wife and I took a random subject we had NEVER every talked about or searched online, and talked about it while her iPhone was on in the background. Two days later, our Facebook advertising completely changed over to cat food for a few days," Neville wrote.

At first, they say it's "theoretically impossible."

Then, "Maybe possible, but certainly not practical."

Then, "But only fringe groups are using it."

Later, "We are studying it."

Now: "It is the future. We are here to provide governance and regulation."
